Now that the season is near when cough and colds will again be prevalent, it is well to consider the need of employing a remedy that will not disturb the stomach nor affect the general system, eve mif taken in frequent doses.

Every grandmother knows the efficacy of horehound grown in country gardens for use when colds prevail. She also knows that there is no better soothing, healing remedy for an irritated throat than pure honey, and that far is an antiseptic and protects the lining of the throat from any putrefaction organisms. These three old fashioned articles have been so carefully compounded for many years that while Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar is the simple remedy indicated by its name, it contains the curative qualities most needed for relieving coughs and colds.
